NEW ZEALAND.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT;
NELSON, 3rd April. Were it not for the frequent disappointments we have had in our hopes of settled peace, I should be inclined to say that this colony was really about to enjoy something of the kind now. From all quarters the news is a peaceable as could be wished at present. The threatening event which last disturbed us was the murder near Wanganui of a retired soldier of one of the Onese's regiments.

of one of the Queen's regiments, but even this seems to have been an act of a very doubtful meaning. The man appears to have had a good deal to do with the natives, and it may good deal to do with the natives, and it may very well be said that his murder was nothing more than an act of private revenge, and had nothing to do with the general question of peace or war. The difficulty now is net so peace or war. The difficulty now is net so much caused by any actual hostility on the part of any of the tribes as by the difficulty of putting a definite end to the state of distrust and mutual dread brought about by the war. At the present moment the settlers taken to Tsranaki and settled in the province as a safe-count to the districts asset the settlers. guard to the districts near the town are rapidly leaving the place. It is not that they have been attacked or indeed at all molested by the natives, but, it appears, merely because they know that they are exposed, and do not see snough inducement to posed, and do not see snough inducement to make them willing to risk this. With the gold-fields of this island within such easy reach, it is not perhaps surprising that of the three or four hundreds of military settlers planted at Taranaki, there are now little more than a score left. The danger is however, that the country will be there are now little more than a score left. The danger is, however, that the country will be left unoccupied until the natives return and claim, and perhaps fight for it again, if the Government was determined enough to maintain its confiscation. The surveyors have been marking out the boundaries of the Wanganui confiscation quite unmolested by the natives, who are the sufferers by the confiscation; but the fact that no one appears willing to settle the fact that no one appears willing to settle upon it may account for the readiness of the natives to see it cut up into blocks and farm sections. I believe that this is at present the only serious remnant of the native difficulty on our hands, but it is a very serious one. In the hands, but it is a very serious one. In the North, that evil is little felt, because, although the greater part of the military settlers have left the Waikato district, there are still a good many there, and the places of many who have gone have been filled by even better settlers. Thus the natives of Waikato have been such heavy sufferers in the war, that, with the exception of the king's party at Kawhia, who seem quite determined not to make any aggressive movement, they are evidently in no position to think of further fighting. The consequence of this is seen in the readiness with which Europeans are leasing the lands entirely in the hands of are teasing the lands entirely in the aands of natives who were in open rebellion two years ago, and going to live in the very midst of them without apprehension. Cattle and sheep are being driven through the very heart of the island in large herds by a handful of stockmen, and no attempt has yet been made either to stop or plunder them. If this state of things only continues for a year, I think the entire and satisfactory pacification of the northern part of the Northern island of New Zealand may be looked upon as secure, but no such progress has been made further south. At Taranaki a has been made further south. At Taranaki a few settlers are trying to do something with their lands, that have now lain waste for some five or six years. The military settlers who were relied upon to add strength to the settlement, and to give confidence to the other settlers by their presence, have with few exceptions sold their lands, and was off to the West Care displacement. gone off to the West Coast diggings with the proceeds. There is nothing to hinder the rebel natives lately dispossessed from coming back and occupying their old villages and patato grounds, the loss of which alone constitutes grounds, the loss of which alone constitutes a legitimate confiscation in the eyes of the natives. They do not understand confiscations bounded by a Government Gazette, and it is not easy to maintain, even on the grounds of modern political economy, that if we cannot make use of the land we can with any show of justice maintain that we have a claim to it. So far as the Taranaki and Wanganui country is concerned, therefore, I fear the Government have still their most difficult problem to solve, and I quite expect they will soon be found ready to offer the land—some of the finest in the colony—to whoever will occupy it. A gold-field of considerable extent in that country would, I believe, give a more satisfac-tory solution to the difficulty than any other; but although efforts are now being made in more than one direction to prospect the country I have very little hope that any success will attend them.

A good deal of interest is felt just now in the position of the Governor and General Chute. It seems to be Sir George Grey's misfortune (or weakness) to quarrel bitterly with every military man who is put in command here. It appears that General Chute has received very peremptory orders direct from home that he is to ship off all the troops from New Zealand, and to remove his head-quarters to Melbourne. The Governor feels slighted in that such orders are not sent through him, and possibly also objects to being left the mere puppet of a colonial Ministry, while hitherto he has had a sort of Viceregal power. The con-sequence is, that he says he will not have the troops removed, and that if General Chute sends them away against his orders he will hold him responsible. On the whole, few think the Governor wise in his position, even while most think he has had scant courtesy from the War Office. The fact is, we have no need of soldiers now, and the people really do not want a single man of her Majesty's forces to protect them. While this is the case, it will be hard to show that any need existed for the quarrel with General Chute, or for any delay in sendng home the remaining soldiers.

H's Excellency has postponed his Nelson out with the General. The people of this pro-vince have elected as Superintendent, the candidate most pledged to the railway scheme between this town and the West Coast. The work, however, is a great one, and it will require no ordinary exertions to accomplish anything. Meanwhile the gradual approach of the diggings in this direction seem likely to favour s execution, either as a whole or is part.

The New Zealand Steam Navigation Company has refused by a majority of two to one the proposal to amalgamate with the Panama Company. This will be for the advantage of the public however it may effect the companies more immediately concerned. The dispute between the Wellington people and the contractors for the patent alin seems to grow more tractors for the patent slip seems to grow more bitter, and I should not be at all surprised if it ends in some other province buying the slip, and thus punishing Wellington for what looks suspiciously like an attempt at repudiation.

The Mataura must have made a complete breakdown either on her homeward or outward trip, as there are no signs of her yet. It is said the machinery was bad when she left Wellington, if so the Company are seriously to blame.

Mr. Dallev addressed the jury for the defence at considerable length.

The Solicitor-General replied, and his Honor having summed up, the jury retired, and after an absence of three-quarters of an hour, returned into court with a verdict of guilty against both prisoners. Winterbank having been previously convided, was sentenced to three years in Serrima gool, and Marshall to two years in Sgdney gool.

The defendants, Michael, Patrick, and William Davoren, and John Brogan, had been committed by the Gouldon's bench for an aggressated assault on Mesers. Horse, Volsey and Cowley Cooper, and the case had been post-poned from last assisses in consequence of the Judge having to start for the Waggs Waggs circuit and being pressed for time. On the case being now called oit, defendants did not appear. It was stated by the Solicitor-General that ethough the witnesses had been bound over to attend at the present assistes, there was no record in the possession of his Honor's associate to show that the defendants had entered into any recognizances. Under these circumstances, he could only apply to have the witnesses bound over to attend at the next Circuit Court, when he would take care to have the defendants in attendances.

The witnesses were accordingly bound over to attend at the next the next sassines.

The criminal business was then postponed to Monday next, on which day jurces are required to attend.

JUDGMENT UPON NEW TRIAL MOTION: POOTRACE, A LAWYLL GARE.

His Henoy Judge M'FARLAND gave the following decision, on Saturday morning.

I bis was a motion upon the part of the defendant for a new trial. The question involved was, whether a foot race agreed to be run between two persons, and for the purposes of which each of them deposited a sum of money with a third party—the whole to be paid over to the winner of the rate—is a "lawful game" within the provise, and therefore taken out of the operation of the senseting part, of our local statute, 14 Vic. That question was raised, and slightly discussed, at the triat; but since then it has been fully argued by Mr. Windeyer, for the defendant, and by Mr. Butler, for the plaintiff; and I have given it careful consideration. A some what similar question is, I understand, now before the Nujrime Court, in Hogan v. Curtis; but a decision is not expected in that case for some time to come; and the parties to the presant case have desired mine upon the existing authorities. It is this: Batty v. Marriott ($ Com. Bench Rep. $15), was decided upon the provise, as well as upon, the snactung part, (immediately praceding.) of the luperial Act 8 and 9 Vic., c. 109, a. 18, (which is verbating with the keal statute above mentioned.) and is a direct, earness authority by the Court of Common Pleas, that sook a bostrace u such a "leaving game"—a game, the issue in which cannot, therefore, after be has run and lost, recover back his deposit from the stakeholder, as money had and received. And that case of Batty v. Marriott was decided subsquently to Varney v. Hickman ($ Com. Bench Rep. 271), in which, it has been continued for the plaintiff in the case I am now considering—though, I think, without sufficient for the race of Batty v. COURT OF PROBATE.—Among useful things not generally known is a regulation which became law some three years ago, by which wills may be proved and letters of administration obtained by "personal application," without the aid of a proctor or solicitor. The advantages of this plan were at once seen and appreciated by Mr. Tidd Pratt, the Registrar of Friendly Socketies, who published directions as to its working in his annual report to Parliament. Plain rules of similar kind have been lately drawn up and sent is all pestmasters in the United Kingdom, for the information of depositors in the post-office awings' banks, and those insured under the Government Insurance and Annuities Act. These "personal applications' can be made either at the chief office, 12, Great Knightrider-street, Doctors'-commons, or st any ose of forty district registries now established for the deceased person had a fixed place of abode within that particular district. A great saving may thus be effected by executors and others in the proving of wills representing only small sums, and it so furnishes as additional inducement for the investment of savings.

A few nights ago, the private house of Mr. Rilery (of the Observatory), at Toorsk, was broken into and a number of valuable strictles stolen from it. On Monday night the residence of Mr. J. It is stated that Mr. Payne and his neighbours are likely to employ special watchmen bresiler.

Mr. Prancis had proposed a committee, compo M exclusively of members sitting on the Ministerial side of the House, and this was justly resented by the Opposition as an unwarrantable indignity which was sought to be placed upon them. Both the Chief Secretary and the Attorney-General denied that there was any such intention but pented out that as the members of the Opposition had consistently opposed the Customs Bill in all'it stages, it would be awaise to place them on a conference appointed to deal with the question. THE CHARGES AGAINST THE REV. CALEB

AS Ecclesiasical Court was held on Wednesday, at Trinity Church, Eastern Hill, for the purpose of investigating a charge of wanton ill treatment lowards a dog, at Wangaratta, on the TSth of October, 1886, preferred against the Rev. Caleb Booth. The proceedings were instituted under the Imperial Act, 18th Vict, No. 40; and the act of declaration set forth a scond count of "brawling."

Mr. J. W. Stephen (the chancellor of the discoses) sat in judgment. Mr. J. B. Bennett (the advocate for the discoses) conducted the prosecution. Mr. Billing, sasisted by Mr. Fullerton, appeared for the respondent, The assessors were the Rev. Mr. Barlow, the New. Mr. Goodman, the Hon. Mr. Sladen, M. L. C., and Mr. Godfrey.

and my reading is, that punishable by law means the law of the lead. It may or may not be that there is a punishment. I think the bishop possesses the power to prevent a minister from officiating in his church. Upon the whole, I ceasider there is no need for withdrawing the charge, but that in the event of the respondent being found guilty of brawling, the assessors should recommend him to be probable by the bishop.

Mr. Bennett then stated the case for the prosecution, and chern persenally acquainted with the respondent for event years, but however coutting his friendly relations event years; but however eventing his friendly relations had been, they would not make him shrink from his duty in the prevent proceedings; and although the facts connected with the prevent charge had assumed some prominence before the public, he haped nothing would be allowed to prejudice or bias the minds of the assessors. The disclarations contain two counts. The ingredients of the offices are different. The first charge he believed to be punishable by law. The crime of brawling; is much been than that of cruelty. By Mr. Billing I believe a verse of a hymn was being sung at the time. The whole transaction occupied two or three minutes.

By Mr. Bennett. It was quite possible for Booth to deliver the dog to Evans when he (Evans) caught it by the forepart.

By an assessor: The struggle lasted for some time, more than a minute.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

Br. Billing, in addressing the assessors, briefly animadverted upon the facts of the case, and endeavoured to show that the first count of the case, that of brawling, was laid under the old etatute of Edward VI. The learned gentleman quoted from "Rogers on Ecclesiastical Law" and entered into a lengthened definition of the term "brawling," urging that it distinctly implied an alterestion. It was quite a common thing, he observed, for cases like the present one to be made sensation cases. The case dai not come under the Ecclesiastical Act, and, therefore, he would claim an acquittal for the respondent. He would, however, call.

This marring one of the mest atrocious and cold blooded morders it has been our lot to record was perpetrated by a Chicaman, opposite Mr. Bacon's store, where Arnold and Barnard streets interest. The victim is Mr. Penberthy, storekeeper, in High street. It appears from the statement of his widow that, feeling rather unwell, he went out to take a walk, leaving her to attend to the business. He was seen walking down Barnard street, and between the Asylus and the Hospital was accosted by his manderer. Apparatuly a few words passed, and he wint on. The Chinaman followed, and accosted him, and immediately struck him on the head with the hammer end of a driving pick. Mr. Bacon, who was working in his garden, adjoiting the road, heard his piercing shriek, and rushing to the fonce saw the manderer strike him four times on the head, with a force sat five was striking a builcok. He immediately jumped over the fence, and with Mr. Reach approached the Chicaman who had walked away from the body of his victim a distance of about forty feet, and we close to the footpath in front of Nelson Jones's brewery. A crowd of persona soon assembled, and the murderer was seared by Mr. Bacon, who, after a struggle, wreached the pick out of his hand. He was then taken down Bridge street to the lock-up, and on the road was handed over to constable Ryan. Mr. Penberthy was conveyed to the heaptal, but on being examined was forth to be perfectly dead. The body was shocking to look at; one wound had fracturing the jaw. On instituting inquiries as to what could possibly have been the motive for this blood thirsty deed, we could learn pone. The prisoner, in a rambling statement made soon after his arrest, said he knew the decreased twe years ago at Maryborough, and he had robbed him. It appears, however, from what we have been able to learn, that the murderer has resided on Bendigo for the list three years. about 140 feet, sixty-three of which was in solid granite. Driving has been commenced from this skaft and has been continued north and south about ten feet each way. The south front is bared, but driving has not yet been commenced, and from the north end the excavation is in from ten to twelve feet. About seventy-five men are employed on these works. At this work of Messes. Simmle and Frazer the geological character of the country suddenly changes, and the last piece of granite rock met with crops out in the aqueduct immediately north of No. 5 tunnel. From this the aqueduct will wind along the side of the hills, falling generally 5 feet to the nile, in a north-westerly direction, crossing the line of railway a little to the north of the Big hill tunnel, and the main road at a point still further north, until at twelve miles from the last tunnel, and 45 miles 14 chains 40 links from the reservoir to be constructed at Anderson's flat about two and a-half miles to the north-east of Lockwood, where it is proposed to construct a reservoir having a capacity of 120,000,000 gallons. I have said that after leaving No. 5 tunnel, the water flows with a general fall of 5 feet to the mile; there are, however, three sudden falls or drops, of about 87 feet, 30 feet, and 7 feet respectively, which it is intended, I believe, to make available for mill-sites, to be worked by water power.

At about nine miles from No. 5 tunnel on the main. make available for mill-sites, to be worked by water power.

At about nine miles from No. 5 tunnel on the main line of aqueduct a smaller aqueduct branches of, and after descending rapidly for four miles and three-quarters discharges itself into a reservoir formed by throwing a dam into Spring Gully. From the point where this branch aqueduct leaves the main line it falls no less than 246 feet, above 102 feet of which is the result of five drops, of 14 feet, 39 feet, 12 feet, 29 feet, and 17 feet respectively. This reservoir at Spring Gully will receive, besides the supply it will derive from the aqueduct, the water from a drainage area of 460 acres, and it will have capacity of 250,000,000 gallons. From this reservoir I believe the water will be drawn for the domestic supply in Sandhurst and its suburbs. The dam will be, when finished, 858 feet in length on top. 50 feet high at its highest point, and 265 feet wide at its greatest width; the water will be available for a depth of 31 feet. Mr. John Dwyer is the contractor for this work, the whole of which is in a very forward state. At the time I visited the works about 300 men were employed, and the embankment was then within 17 feet of its height. The outlet tunnel, 138 feet in length, was finished; and the work which seemed most urgently wanted was the levelling and clearing of the interior of the reservoir, which, however, was not included in the present contract. I notice that one of the members for Sandhurst has given notice of question as to when tenders for this work are, to be invited; so we may conclude it will not be long delayed. Here, as at Malmsbury, the outside body of contractors are dissatisfied with the way in which the works are throughout than that surveyed by Mr Brady; and with about the same length of tunnel, although is different positions, it has been found possible to shorten the line of aqueduct about nine een miles. In one place the construction of two tunnels, Nos. 4 and 5, has enabled the engineer to dispense with about seven miles of open aqueduct. I do not wish to blame Mr. Brady produced a thoroughly well-digested, well-developed scheme of water supply, accurately surveyed, for the very small sum of £2000, and instead of being open to any charge of not having done his work thoroughly. Mr. Brady is deserving of all praise for having done so much, and at the same time so well. Had Mr. Brady been at the head of affairs now, he wou'd doubtless have seen and adopted many of the improvements which less rapid and more deliberate surveys have shown to be practicable.

The reader who has followed me through my remarks on these works will remember, perhaps, that I have enumerated at different points of the line the large number of 950 men at day wages in the Government employ, and I know the impression prevals that the ranks of these men are recruited from the lame and the halt, and the blind, and that political partisanship is the first qualification for employment. As regards the first of these imputations, I can speak from observation; the men are a fair lot of men; and as for the second, I was assured that every man is employed on his merits, and on his merits alone, and that the inefficient are constantly and continuously weeded out. I am satisfied, too, from facts which came under my own observation, and from inquiries made by me, that every effort is being made by the engineers and their various assistants to get the work done at the lowest possible rate, and to remove every impediment which even in the smallest degree tends to cause delay and to increase expense; but it is energy thrown away in a intempting to reintroduce and bolster up a system which was years ago abandoned in this colony a corrupt in the highest degree; an

The Photographing of Sourd.—On Friday, January 18, Professor Tyndall made known at the Royal Institution the results of some curious investigations by himself into the properties of the sensitive stames. He produced a narrow gas fiame, about twenty inches long, which was turned up till it was on the point of flaring. The gas was not taken from the mains, which would not have given sufficiently equable and heavy pressure, but was stored up in a small gasemeter, with a weight apparently about fifty-six pounds on the top thereof. This long, naked flame was remarkably sensitive to sharp high notes of sound. A slight hise from the lecturer made it shrink to haif its length, whilst the noise of a whistle made it contract to eight inches. It danced a tuns to the notes given off by a musical box. It was not affected by deep, heavy sounds; but when Professor Tyndall repeated some lines from Spencer to it, the flame dipped at the "S" and all the sharper sounds. It was sensitive to the ticking of a watch, and the rathing of halfpence in the gallery of the institution made it contract at will. When a long gas flame begins to flare and flutter, it suddenly contracts to less than its former length, and the sound-wave has the same effect upon the flame as increasing the pressure of gas. The rustling of paper agitated the flame in the most violent manner, and so did the creaking of boots. Here, for the first time, power has been piaced in our hands to raise the question of the possibility of photographing sound. The flame danced up and down to points varying from eight to twenty inches, according to the particular sound given off by a musical box on the table. By the admixture of oxygen that flame can be brightened, and by the interposition of an opaque screen, with a vertical slit in it, an expanding and contracting line of light thrown upon a screen or collodionised plate. If it fiell upon a collodionised plate particular is not interposition of the flame—one-half the plate being light, the other dark. While looking at the e with sufficient exactitude to make the utilisation of the fact easy. Even when sound has been made to register itself in curved lines, the interruption of those lines becomes the next matter of sifficulty. It is on record that recently, by the aid of a vibrating membrane farnished with a very soft and delicate pencil, sound has been recorded in circles and loops which nobody could read. In a curved line, like that suggested by the new discovery, there is more simplicity. Many long years must probably elapse before we see an automatic phonetic reporter of public speeches; but when a fiame is seen dancing up and down twelve inches or less at the voice of man, one step on the road seems to have been gained.—British Journal of Photography.

The Paussians at Frankfort.—A correspondent of the Courrier du Bas Rhin gives the following example of the continued disfavour in which the Prussians are held by the burghers of the ci-decant free city:—'A few nights since Shakspere's play of Shylock (the "Merchant of Venice") was represented at the principal theatre. At that part of the play where the judge inquires of Shylock what is his demand against his debtor, the Jew replies, 'A pound of flesh.' At that noment one of the audience rose up in the gallery and added those words of weighty recollection of the Prussian occupation, 'and eight cigars!' The Frankforters hailed the addition with continued applause. The Prussian officers protested, and the police cleared the place.'

NAPOLEON III. AND THE PARISIANS.—The Emperor has of late adopted a Haroun-al-Raschid sort of habit—i. e., of going about alone, on foot or in a private brougham, which is very distressing to all his surroundings, great sticklers for etiquette, still more so to the Prefect of the Police, who objects—very naturally—to his Majesty going out unattended. The sther morning, says the Paris correspondent of the Standard, he walked down the Tulleries, crossed the river, and literally "beat up" the Foreign Minister, M. de Moustier, who was surprised at the unexpected honour paid him.

THE DISMASTED SHIP ETHIOPIAN.

The anxiety which has been caused to many persons in this ci.y in consequence of a diamasted vessel being off the port has been happily dispelled by the arrival, on Saturday afternow, of the abovenamed ship, in two of the French was steamer Marceau, which fell in with her about 55 miles from the Heads, and at once rendered the necessary assistance. From the appearance of the vessel's deck she must have suffered considerably, which is borne out by the following particulars furnished by Captain Faulkner from his log:—

MONDAY, APRIL 15, 1867

THE item of foreign intelligence which seem most directly to concern Great Britain is the case of the Alabama, and the claims for compensation. When once the principle is admitted, the only question which can remain must relate to the amount. This will not much interest the world. We may hope that Uncle Jonathan will be satisfied with his award, and that we shall hear no more of an affair which reflects little honour on Great Britain. We may however, observe, by a simultaneous contrast how ad antageous is the political system which enables the Sovereign without dishonour to shift the policy of the country according to the changes of the times. Lord DERBY can revoke the decision of his predecessor, and so save us from a war on a point of honour. The chief of the Americans is but the head of a faction, and by his policy must stand or fall.

The progress of the conflict of parties in the United States will occupy their attention for some time to come. The establishment of military government by the Congress in the South in defiance of the PRESIDENT is not merely a great constitutional change, but also ar assertion of a right which could only be founded on conquest. The gathering of the governors of the South, and their programme, at least proves how deeply is felt the ascendency of the Northern party, and that the South is obliged to accept the conditions of the victors. The Resultion like is that the Government of The Republican idea is that the Government o the United States shall hold in subordination every corporation within its bounds, and though the Supreme Court can declare the proceed-ings of the Congress illegal, it is clear that its decisions will be borne down by the sovereign will of the Legislature, which is nominally subject to it. The rapid march of events has no parallel but in the first French Revolution. Happily, the warning of that dreadful example—perhaps the different temperament of the nation—has hitherto con-fined the collision to the votes of a convention or a congress, to protests and vetoes and other constitutional forms. There is a moment in national life when the differences of opinion and interests are too vast for traditional restraints; and when those who have contended for the mastery in debate disappear, to give place to sterner combatants and more deadly issues. How near that time may

The rejection of the Tariff Bill is probably a course desired by those who carried it. It was a measure which rested on no definite principle, but on the strength and moderation of the lobby politicians. Those who could prevail with the greater number of members obtained some special protection to their particular interest. When these were all assembled in a single bill the result was so preposterous, so contradictory, so absurd, that we may suppose the Senate, a more sober body were ashamed of the deformity of its features, and withdrew i from the gaze of the world. A more importan change is, however, noted, which is intended it the power of the PRESIDENT. By the Constitution the PRESIDENT is responsible and the choice of his Ministers is therefore by a natural sequence his official prerogative, No chief can be held to account for the acts of men who are not under his control. The confirmation of diplomatic appointments by the Senate is indeed an ancient constitutional provision in view of different responsibilities with which they are charged. The new law is a great organic change, and is another expression of distrust of the PRESIDENT, and another step towards the centralisation of power in the Legislature. No one need be told that the Representatives of the United States will, when collisions shall take place between the two Houses, come out triumphant. There is however, suspended over this great republic cloud which may precipitate its political partie. The great debt, the artificial value of a commodities, the rate of exchange with foreign countries, and the ruin of commerce, may at n distant date involve the nation in great social issue of a hundred million new greenbacks shows that the Senate is not without its appre-

There is an item of news which will awaken universal admiration. The grand spectacle of private benevolence offered by Mr. George Peabody, both in England and the North, is to be repeated in the States of the South. Lately we reported the princely donation to the Con-gregational Church of his native place; but his affections seem to be catholic, in the noblest sense, and his gift will tend to remove those deep shadows of ignorance which is the great peril of the South. From Africa we hear the sad intelligence that the great missionary and traveller, Dr. LIVINGSTONE, has failen under the axe of a savage. Nothing can destroy the claim of this eminent man to the respect of the world, but | favourably by English capitalists, but the said there have been rumours from time to time of conduct in persons around him not likely to win and preserve the confidence of a savage people. The demon of the slave-trade causes the track of every white man in Africa to be red with blood.

A considerable part of the European information has reached us already. The only new event which assumes a definite aspect is the proposal made to the Cabinets to change the government of Egypt from a vice-royalty to, in fact, an independent State. It belongs to that class of movements which predict and prepare for the fall of the Turkish Empire. The case in favour of the Viceroy is stronger than has been ever made out for the independence of Greece. Egyptian ruler has performed effectively the functions of government, he has a great country within his reach, and "forty centuries look down from the Pyramids" on his efforts to restore the land of the Pharaoks to its former glory.

If France supports these schemes she will but carry still further her traditional policy; but she will add to that complication of politics. which commonly ends in great quarrels, great battles, and great catastrophes. The Suez Canal will be then understood, and will show that, however inevitable, that enterprise was one blow more to an Empire with whose politics blow more to an Empire with whose pointies our own are too united.

The uncertainty of the fate of Mexico is not removed by the telegram. It informs us that the leader of the Republicans is a captive and that the head of the monarchy is in retreat. of partisans as North American statesmen had supposed, and that his resistance to expulsion has not been so hopeless as to deprive it of the dignity of courage and the honours of war.

The policy of Naroleon, expressed in his speech, he has explained more than once. The renewed declaration of cordial relations with Figland, founded on expanding commerce and common views on international affairs, is the more assuring that it seems to be supported

THE meeting of the British Parliament has been followed by an event not altogether unexpected. The Conservative Ministry has been broken up and reconstructed on the Keform question, was known that the Tory party was on that question. Some are honestly and absolutely opposed to reform altogether, or in favour only of such a pretence of reform as should give with one hand and take away with the other; while another section is in favour of yielding to the times as much as could no longer be safely resisted. While Mr. GLAD-STONE was in power this division of Tory opinion was concealed, for the whole of the party united in voting him out. But when, instead of the negative side in politics, the Conservatives had to take the positive side—when they had either to propose something definite, or to avow before the House of Commons and or to avow before the House of Commons and the country that nothing should be proposed, then all the differences of sentiment and opinion became manifest. Those members of the Cabinet who are really averse to reform have resigned their seats, and a pro-Reform Cabinet instead of a divided Cabinet has resulted. In taking this course the retiging members, have acceled with the retiring members have acted with candour. However we may differ from them in opinion as to the political necessity, we must admit that they have acted with integrity. It is so common to see men change their politics to stick to office that it is refreshing to find men banest and candid enough to secede even from their own party on the basis of personal con-In consequence of this change, the plan of receeding by resolution is abandoned, and the course of introducing a bill by which they will stand or fall. The outlines of their proposa are given, and do not furnish much ground for objection. The bill will be as genuine a Re-form Bill as that of Mr. GLADSTONE, and will give quite as great an extension of the suffrage, while the aim has obviously been to include within the pale of the Constitution only those who have some bona fide stake in the prosperity of the country. The disfranchisement of the corrupt little boroughs will be a great improvement. After the revelations that have lately been made, no one can defend these nests of corruption as the bulwarks of the Constitution. The practice of bribery has been reduced to an art, and the increasing ten-dency of rich men to seek a seat in Parliament has furnished a constant supply of the funds wherewith to buy votes. The only effectual remedy against the evil is to enlarge the area of the constituencies.

It is premature, at present, to speculate on the fate of this particular bill, but taking its in-troduction by a Tory Ministry into conjunction with Mr. GLADSTONE's policy, it is now clear that by one Ministry or other a Reform Bill will be passed, adding to the existing consti-tuencies something like half a million new capitalists seem to be some time in making up their minds about it. The total loss on Overend and Gunner's failure is reported to be five millions sterling. This will give some idea of the widespread desolation caused by this crash. The poor as well as the rich have felt the effects of this crisis, and the distress among the working classes in the East of London has been but feebly relieved by a charitable expenditure among them of thirteen thousand pounds. This state of things may suffice to show our Protectionist friends that even great manufacturing industry is no protection against times of great distress and want of employment, and to be out of work in the depth of a Lendon winter is a sorer trouble

The effects of the financial crisis seems to be the effects of the financial crisis seems to be still felt in India, where confidence is hardly yet restored in the banks. The Agra Bank yet restored in the banks. The Agra Bank has resumed operations, but the Bank of Bombay was tried by a severe run, and seems only to have saved itself by throwing itself into the arms of the Bank of Bengal. Yet the commercial future of India seems promising. There is an enormous acreage under cotton cultivatien, notwithstanding the cessation of the American war, and all the Indian cotton that is grown seems to be easerly bought for is grown seems to be eagerly bought for export. We read also that the quinine plantations are proving a great success, that a new pearl fishery has been discovered, and that the coffee plantations in Ceylon are being rapidly extended, notwithstanding a being rapidly extended, notwithstanding a falling-off this year in the returns. The railway works, too, are being pushed with energy. All these things indicate a vigorous commercial life in India, and that its resources are being developed by the combined aid of European capital and superintendence, and Asiatic labour acombination which under happy anytics, in —a combination which, under happy auspices, is capable of producing splendid results.

ROYAL SYDNEY YACHT SQUADRON.

In obedience to the orders of the Commodore of the squadron a large number of yachta assembled in Farm Cove as a little after 2 o'clock on Saturday last for evolutions. The squadron was under the command of Cowmodore Walker, and as that gentleman is about to leave for England, it will protably be the last time for some months to come that the yachts will have an opportunity of performing evolutions under similar circumstances. The Commodore was on board the Vice-Commodore's yacht Era, and there were elever yachts under sait, the only absentess being the Haides and the Ida. The evolutions were commenced by the yachts following the Commodore's yacht Era, and there was the hastour, near to Dawe's Point, when they put about and formed line abreast to the port of the Commodore. In this order they sailed down the harbour a considerable distance, and then again followed the Commodore in line. This was the best performed evolution of the day, the yacht presenting a very pretty sight indeed. When off Share's required were roun up very sharply by all the yachts. The last to get her topsail set was the Xarifa, the delay being caused, apparantly, by some of the gear getting foul. The yachts then formed line to starboard of the Commodore and procleded up the Haibour. When off Dawes' Point the Commodore made the signal to "strike topmasta," which was exceedingly well performed by the whole of the yachts - a feat that was all the more creditable from the fact that it was almost entirely unexpected. The wind failing light, the signal was now made to salute the Commodore, and this being done, the yachts were allowed to part company.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH ON THE OPEN-ING OF PARLIAMENT

The Royal Speech stated that Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick demand a Confederation, and a bill for effecting that purpose had since been introduced and approved. Mention is made of the Indian famine. I contains congratulations on the suppression of Fenianism in Ireland, and the restoration of the Habeas Corpus Act. Allusion is made to the termination of cholers, and urges continued vigilance over the cattle plague. The notice of Parliament is drawn to the want of a pure water supply for London and other large cities. The Speech contains the usual paragraph about the Estimates, which states that there will be an increase in that for the army, as the wants of the nation may necessitate. With reference to Reform, there are strong recommendations for moderation and forbearance. and hopes are expressed that measures may be passed which, without unduly disturbing the balance of power, should freely extend the elective franchise. A bill is to be introduced for improving the condition of the mercantile marine, and to supply seamen for the Royal Navy. A commission is to be appointed to inquire into the organisation of trades' unions, and other associations, and to suggest any improvement that can be made in the law for the mutual benefit of workmen and employers. A bill is to be introduced to improve the relations of landlord and tenant in Ireland.

2. Such increase will be best effected by both reducing the value of the qualifying tenement in counties and boroughs, and other franchise not dependent on such value.

3. That while it is desirable that more direct representation be given to the labouring class. it is contrary to the constitution of this realm to give to any one class or interest a predominatng pewer over the rest of the community.

4. That occupation franchise in counties and boroughs be based upon the principle of rating. 5. That the principle of plurality of votes, if adopted by Parliament, would facilitate the settlement of the borough franchise on an exended basis.

6. That it is expedient to revise the existing distribution of seats.

7. That in such revision it is not expedient that any borough now represented in Parliament should be wholly disfranchised.

8. That in revising the existing distribution of seats, this House will acknowledge as the main consideration the expediency of supplying representation to places net at present represented, and which may be considered entitled to that privilege.

9. It is expedient that provision be made for the better prevention of bribery and corruption

10. It is expedient that the system of registration of voters in counties should be assimilated as far as possible to that which prevails in boroughs.

11. It shall be open to every Parliamentary elector, if he thinks fit, to record his vote by means of a polling paper, duly signed and authenticated.

12. That provision be made for diminishing the distance voters have to travel for the purpose of recording votes, so that no expenditure for such purpose shall hereafter be legal.

13. That a humble address be presented to her Majesty, praying her to issue a Royal commission, to form and submit, for the considera tion of Parliament, a scheme for new and enlarged boundaries of existing Parliamentary boroughs, where their position extends beyond the limits now assigned to such boroughs, and to fix, subject to the decision of Parliament boundaries of such other boroughs as Parliament may deem fit to be represented in this

THE AMERICAN ARMY. (From the Anglo-American Times.)
The system in force in the United States of furnish ing, through the President, for the information of the nation, full annual reports from the head of each The system in force in the United States of furnishing, through the President, for the information of the nation, full annual reports from the head of each Department of the Government, is an admirable one. Among the most interesting of these documents is that of the Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War. The tale told by this Minister is marvellous, and one that cannot fall to be gratifying to the people. It records how the Department dealt with the debris left on its hands, both of men and materials, on the close of the successful war. The entire number of volunteer troops to be mustered out was, on May 1, 1865, 1,034,064. By the 20th January, 1866, 918,722 volunteers had been paid up and discharged. By the 1st of last November this number was increased to 1,923,021, leaving in the service 11,043 volunteers, white and coloured. The regular army now comprises 10 regiments or 120 companies of artillery; and 45 regiments or 450 companies of infantry. Of these, 2 cavalry and 4 infantry regiments are composed of coloured men, and 4 infantry regiments are men who were wounded on service. The troops have been regularly paid, and the demands of the discharged promptly met. During the issel year ending June last 10,331,004 dollars were disbursed to the Army and Military Academy, and 248,943,313 dollars to Volunteers. The health of the troops has been, on the whole, good, and the threatened attack of cholers, through the skill and care of the surgeons, in a great measure averted. Out of every $2 treated for all causes of white troops one has died. The mortality among the coloured troops has been greater, for out of every 25 cases treated there has been one death. During the seal year, only 7 remained under treatment. One hundred and eighty-seven hospitals are spread over the country, with a total capacity of 10,381 beds. The States are divided into thirteen military departments, each under the command of a general officer. Meade had his head-quarters at Philadelphia, Hooker at Detroit, Canby at Washington, Schofield at been taken at £47; cod, £42; sperm in the whole being under the command of General Grant.

Over 207,000 horses and mules have been sold for the whole being under the command of General Grant. Over 207,000 horses and mules have been solid for 16,269,075 dollars; about 4700 barracks, hospitals, and other buildings were disposed of for 447,772 dollars. Five hundred and insety ocean transports have nearly all been got rid of, and of 262 vessels employed on the rivers none now remain. Of the military railroads, officially stated to have reached an extent of 2630 miles, and to possess 433 engines and 6605 cars, all have been transferred to companies, upon condition of the loyal organisation of directors. Notwithstanding the sale of those large amounts of stores an adequate supply of war material remains on hand to meet any emergency that can possibly arise. The stock of clothing, equipage, subsistence, arms, ammunition, and field artillery, is sufficient for the immediate equipment of large armies. The disbanded troops stand ready to respond to the national call, and 1,000,000 men can be organised, atmed, equipped, and whatever portion of them is required concentrated at the points military emergency may designate. The Secretary can therefore assure the nation, that though the war expenses have been reduced to the footing of an economical peace establishmen, military strength remains unimpaired and in a condition to be promptly put forth. The arming of the troops remaining in the garrison has been carefully considered. A Board of competent officers met on March 16, and, after a testing till June 4 the various plans submitted, they recommended the conversion of the Spring seld ritte munkets into breect-loaders. This alteration has been carefully considered. A Board of competent officers met on March 16, and, after a testing till June 4 the various plans submitted, they recommended the conversion of the Spring seld ritte munkets into breect-loaders. This alteration has been so successfully effected that it is believed that the arm now in use is in all respects superior to the Prussian needle-guns, while the metallic ammunition is decidedly superior.
